Dear Correspondent:

I regret very much to advise you that the lady who had worked for me for 43 years and who played a major role in all of my family history research and book publications, died recently of cancer of the throat.

This has thrown the office out of kilter for handling the extensive correspondence that clears through here every week.

Therefore, I must inform you by this method that I will answer your letter as soon as it is humanly possible to do so, but it will probably be several weeks, as I also have to look after the law practice. I resigned as a Federal Judge on February 1, 1984.

I regret the delay and will be writing to you as soon as possible.

Sincerely yours,

J. P. Coleman
